Leopold & The 5 Senseeteers: Flour Power

By Joshua Tabachnick • Illustrated by Dustin Dahlman

MAKING SENSE OF YOUR 5 SENSES

Action heroes teach your kids about their 5 senses – taste, touch, hearing, sight and smell – in a fun learning adventure for children.

Join 6-year old Leopold as he learns about his 5 senses with the help of his superhero friends, the 5 SENSETEERS. They embark on an educational journey to shop and bake a cake for his sister's fifth birthday party – all the while teaching your own children about their 5 senses with the help of Mr. Touchovsky, Senor Hearwell, Miss. See, Mr. Budtaste, and Mrs. Goodsmell – the 5 SENSETEERS.

Leopold and your children will learn not only about their 5 senses, but also about the meaning of special words (such as the difference between flowers and flour, measuring cups and various cooking ingredients). But, most important, they learn that although we are all different and each offer unique and individual traits, it is much better when we come together and work as one.

The book includes song lyrics for a music video on the website so that children can sing along. Puzzles and games for children are also on the website (www.Senseeteers.com).

Leopold & the 5 Senseeteers: Flower Power was written by Joshua Tabachnick. Joshua was born in Montreal, Canada and moved with his family to New York at the age of thirteen. After University, he joined the family publishing business where he began his writing career in consumer periodicals while continuing his studies in music composition. He is currently living in Los Angeles with his wife where he continues working as a film/TV composer and author.

The Illustrator, Dustin Dahlman, is a student at Savannah College of Art and Design studying graphic design and illustration. Dustin is at work on the next Leopold book in the series: “Lost and Found.”
